ABSTRACT

A system and method for creating and employing user-defined fields with an information technology system is provided. An exemplary computational system has a relational database and relational database management software program. The method of the present invention enables the creation of a user-defined field that may be associated with one or more records of one or more tables of a database of the computational system. Data may be appended to records without changing the schema of the table.